

Take Action Worksheet for on the table.

For use at the conclusion of your On the Table event if participants in your discussion want to take steps together to turn your ideas into action

Now that you've talked about community issues that concern you, it's time to let your table take you places. You may want to spend a few minutes with your guests brainstorming what happens after your table: What are actions you can take, as a group or as individuals, to move your conversation from ideas to impact.

Actions can include convening a follow-up conversation, collaborating with an organization tackling the issue you discussed, or raising funds for a grassroots organization working to address a gap important to you. Record your actions in the chart below.

Who is your community? Community may be defined as a group of people who share interests, geography, identity, aspirations, professions or more; in short, tell us who's invited
What challenge does your community face? Describe the problem that you are seeking to take on, bring to light, support, solve or otherwise address
How will you take on the challenge? Share what your group will do and whether the approach involves a particular skill or talent that exists within your community. Consider whether you will collaborate with an organization or other groups in the community
What social infrastructures already exist for this? What opportunities for social infrastructure do you see?
Who will lead the action?*
Who can help?* Are any local organizations already taking action on this issue? Can your group help? Are there any limits to who can help?

Questions? Contact us at onthetable@wrcf.ca

#onthetablewr

*If it makes sense, collect names and contact information, such as email addresses and phone numbers